

COMMUNITY SCIENCE

A small, stylized illustration of a bee is positioned in the top right corner of the header area.

Looking to participate in the ever-growing body of scientific knowledge? We've compiled a list of community science projects for you!

What is community science?

Community science connects the public to academic research, allowing people of varying backgrounds to participate in and contribute to science in a meaningful way.

List of community science projects:

Birds

Celebrate Urban Birds

FeederWatch: Count Feeder Birds for Science

Climate Impact

Sugar Maple Climate Project - Great Lakes Research and Education

US National Phenology Network

Insects

Bumblebee Watch

Dragonfly Mercury Project - US National Park Service

PollardBase

Integrated Monarch Monitoring Program - Features the Wisconsin Butterfly Monitoring Network, established by MPM and the Milwaukee Harbor District

In Wisconsin

Squirrel Census

Wisconsin Turtle Conservation Program

Wisconsin eBird

Wisconsin Butterflies

Various

Zooniverse

CitizenScience.gov

